Our Learning This Week:

IMPORTANT UPCOMING DATES:

Reading: Next week, we are going to wrap up our nonfiction unit in reading. We will finish a read aloud on storms, and then move into a new unit of study on how readers have big jobs to do. Some of the jobs that they will learn about include being a boss of their reading by: stopping at the first sign of trouble, trying something, trying something else to get the job done, and then to check it and do a triple-check!

1/7: NO SCHOOL- Teacher Institute
1/8: School Resumes
1/10 & 1/11: Fastbridge Testing
1/17: Wear sports team for attitude & 2ND QUARTER ENDS

Writing: Students are ready to publish and finalize all of the details for their "All About" books! Next week, we will be starting a new unit on convincing their reader by: writing their review/opinion, giving lots of reasons, adding details, talking back, using sparkly words, and quoting experts.

Math: Students have really liked the start of our new module for math on measurement. They got to create a number path in our classroom with duct tape and follow the path to see how many units it was! Next week, we will continue learning more about measurement and ways to measure things by seeing if an object is longer/shorter than something.
