Our Learning This Week:

Reading: This week, students have continued working on being word detectives by learning how to break apart hard words and using snap words to help them come up with new words that are not on the word wall. Students are still learning about different "missions" as word detectives!

Writing: This week, students were introduced to "how-to" writing. Students came up with topics that teach someone to do something. They have been finalizing their steps and adding pictures and making sure that their steps are clear. Students also got to celebrate their writing with some of the other first grade classrooms! Students will be assessed on non-fiction text features next Monday.

Math: This week, students focused on relating addition and subtraction facts to see how knowing addition facts can help them with subtraction. They also took the end of the module assessment for this unit. They will be starting a new module on Monday!
